About the Film

This groundbreaking and acclaimed documentary film screening is open to the public, faculty, and students as a community service of the Boise State Center for the Study of Aging.

A total immersion into the fragmented day-to-day experience of mental illness, You're Looking at Me Like I Live Here and I Don't is the first documentary filmed exclusively in a unit specifically for care of those with Alzheimer's & other dementias, and the first told from the perspective of someone suffering from Alzheimer's disease. It is a touching account of Lee Gorewitz's life, her penetrating ruminations and charismatic vitality. Here is the journey of a woman who will not let us forget her – even as she struggles to remember herself.

The film screening will be followed by an insightful panel discussion about the state of Alzheimer's research, treatment interventions and community resources available for caregivers. There will be a brief question and answer period afterwards. Community resources for caregivers will also be on display.
